a dutch policy scientist once said the information and knowledge in the twenty first century has the shelf life of fresh fish and learning in this age often means learning where and how to find something and how to relate it to a specific situation instead of knowing everything one needs to know on top of this the world has become so highly interconnected that we have come to realise that every decision that we make can have repercussions somewhere else to touch as many bases as possible we need to work with knowledgeable others from different fields multiple agents and take heed of their points of view multiple representations to do this we make increasing use of computers and computer mediated communication if computer supported collaborative learning cscl is not simply a newly discovered hype in education what is it and why are we writing a book about it dissecting the phrase into its constituent parts we see that first of all cscl is about learning and in the twenty first century this usually means constructivist learning the similarities between the united states and south africa with respect to race power oppression and economic inequities are striking and a better understanding of these parallels can provide educational gains for students and educators in both countries through shared experiences and perspectives this volume presents scholarly work from us and south african scholars that advance educational practice in support of social justice and transformative learning it provides a comprehensive framework for developing transformational learning experiences that facilitates leadership for social justice and a deeper understanding of the factors influencing personal national and global identity this book is devoted to the modeling and understanding of complex urban systems this second volume of understanding complex urban systems focuses on the challenges of the modeling tools concerning e g the quality and quantity of data and the selection of an appropriate modeling approach it is meant to support urban decision makers including municipal politicians spatial planners and citizen groups in choosing an appropriate modeling approach for their particular modeling requirements the contributors to this volume are from different disciplines but all share the same goal optimizing the representation of complex urban systems they present and discuss a variety of approaches for dealing with data availability problems and finding appropriate modeling approaches and not only in terms of computer modeling the selection of articles featured in this volume reflect a broad variety of new and established modeling approaches such as an argument for using big data methods in conjunction with agent based modeling the introduction of a participatory approach involving citizens in order to utilize an agent based modeling approach to simulate urban growth scenarios a presentation of semantic modeling to enable a flexible application of modeling methods and a flexible exchange of data an article about a nested systems approach to analyzing a city's interdependent subsystems according to these subsystems different velocities of change an article about methods that use luhmann's system theory to characterize cities as systems that are composed of flows an article that demonstrates how the sen nussbaum capabilities approach can be used in urban systems to measure household well being shifts that occur in response to the resettlement of urban households a final article that illustrates how adaptive cycles of complex adaptive systems as well as innovation can be applied to gain a better understanding of cities and to promote more resilient and more sustainable urban futures this unique volume is based on the philosophy that the teaching of history should emphasize critical thinking and attempt to involve the student intellectually rather than simply provide names dates and places to memorize the book approaches history not as a cut and dried recitation of a collection of facts but as multifaceted discipline in examining the various perspectives historians have provided the author brings a vitality to the study of history that students normally do not gain the text is comprised of 24 historiographical essays each of which discusses the major interpretations of a significant topic in mass communication history students are challenged to evaluate each approach critically and to develop their own explanations as a textbook designed specifically for use in graduate level communication history courses it should serve as a stimulating pedagogical tool

In Hart's book, the concept of law is perhaps the single greatest contribution to the field of legal philosophy. In this century, Hart lays the groundwork for the continued progress in the perennial debate between legal positivism and natural law. This book briefly reviews the historic significance of that debate and demonstrates how Hart paves the way for an enlightened analysis of the tenuous relationship between law and morality. It provides a detailed examination of Hart's efforts to establish a legal framework through primary and secondary rules and an ultimate rule of recognition. It focuses specifically on Hart's reliance on the internal perspective as a means of establishing the form of obligation necessary for a legal system. It examines Hart's treatment of the relationship between law and morality and Hart's mischaracterization of St. Thomas Aquinas's natural law theory.

Enduring liberalism pursues two objectives. One, it explores the political thought of public intellectuals and the general public since the 1960s. Two
